

Bridge Announcement

Following a strategic review of our business by management and the firm's owner, Dillon Eustace, it was agreed that in order for Bridge to continue to expand and enhance its service offering it was important for the firm to become independent of a full service law firm.

In this context, Bridge is delighted to announce that, effective today, Paul McNaughton, David Dillon and Bridge management will form the new ownership of the firm.

Paul McNaughton is an experienced funds industry professional and has been involved in the funds industry in Dublin since the inception of the IFSC having established both Bank of Ireland's and Deutsche Bank's fund businesses.

David Dillon is a founding partner of Dillon Eustace and worked on the approval of the very first fund approved in the IFSC in 1989. David is retiring from Dillon Eustace and will devote much of his time in helping develop Bridge in a non-executive role.

Patrick Robinson will continue to manage the business and lead its management team.

It is the new owners' intention to continue to enhance and expand the firm's service offering which will build on the recent recruitment of a number of experienced personnel in consideration of our regulatory application for a UCITS / AIF Management Company which is currently underway
